Today's vote certified Mr. Schmidt as the new leader of the left-liberal coalition of the Social Democrats and the Free Democratic party that has controlled the Bonn government since 1969. Under Mr. Brandt, Mr. Schmidt served successively as defense minister and finance

JERUSALEM, May 16 (AP) --Israeli planes bombed and strated Palestinian refugee camps and Lebanese communitles toda!. leaving more than 150 dead and wounded, in an Israell retaliation for the terrorist attack yesterday at MaaloL

"You can see it as a retaliation," Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur. the Israeli chief of staff, said at a press conference a few hours after the jets returned from the half-bour raids. There is no doubt that the horror in Maalot yesterday helped us in deciding to bomb these targets." At the same time, the army displayed the underwear of the three terrorists in the Maalot raid, which was marked "made in Lehanon," In Beleut, a Lebanece Defen.

But Palestinian guerrillas here said scores of children were buried by rubble in one part of the Ein el-Helweh refugee camp and many more casualties were coming in from a Lebanese-populated apartment complex

An Israeli communique said: "The attack started at about 1500 and continued intermittently for about half an hour. All planes returned safely. "Targets attacked included terrorist concentrations in southern Tehanon and 'Patahland,' and offices, headquarters, ordnance depots and workshops of terrorist organizations in the Nabativa and Sidon and Sur region-on the Lebanese coast.

Threatens 'Gravest Consequences'

Fahmy Warns Israel on Aggression

CAIRO, May 16.—Egypt's Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy warned tonight that the Arab states cannot stand idly by in the face of "Israeli acts of aggression" such as today's air raids on Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon.

The Middle East News Agency quoted Mr. Fahmy as saying such raids would only have the "gravest

"Isrzel must know that the Arab nation cannot stand with hands tied in the face of this reckless terrorism," Mr. Fahmy said, according to the agency. Nobody can miss the weakness of the pretext Israel used in justifying its repeated aggression. Lebanon's foreign minister, Fouad Naffah, stressed several times that Lebanese territory was not used in attacks on Israel," Mr. Fahmy said.

Sadat Meets Arafat Earlier today President Anwar

Sadat met with Palestinian guerrilla leader Yassir Arafat, the agency said. It did not say what they discussed. Before seeing Mr. Sadat, Mr. Arafat had met with Mr. Fahmy. In Washington, the White House criticized the Israeli air raids over Lebanon and Jesterday's Palestinian terrorist attack at Maalot, which led to the Israeli reprisals. Deputy Press Secretary Gerald

Warren said: "Continuing cycles of violence of this sort can only obstruct the achievement of a peaceful settlement in the Middle East." Asked if the statement applied to the Israeli raids as well as the Palestinian terrorism, Mr. Warren said. "It is directed at all acts of terrorism and violence " When a questioner persisted in asking if the Israell air raids specifically were included, Mr. Warren said, "Yes."

The White House also made public a letter from President again the need for true peace in Nixon to Israeli Premier Golda the Middle East, I can assure Mcir. which read: "Our sorrow for the tragic loss of so many of Israel's children at Maalot cannot be expressed in words. Mrs. Nixon and I, along with all Americans, grieve with you and the parents and schoolmates of those who died. "This senseless act of teryou that our efforts towards this goal will not waver ..." In statements prior to learning of the Israeli reprisal, work leaders generally condemned the Arab guerrilla attack on Maalot. British Prime Minister Harold Wilson called it "an evil outrage" and United Nations Secretary-

Mr. Khene said that OPEC representatives will meet June 15 in Quito, Ecuador, to decide on world oil prices for the third quarter of this year. He implied there was little chance they would vote to lower the posted price of $11.65 a barrel. This has been the price for more than six months, more than triple the level of a year ago. Mr. Khene was asked about reports that Iran and Venezuela want prices raised to $20 a barrel ard that Saudi Arabia wants them lowered to $8 to $10 a

Izvestia Says Peking Purges Foes of Policy

MOSCOW, May 18 (NYT).-The Soviet Union charged yesterday that China was purging the ranks of its military and civilian officials out of fear that they might mount "organized opposition" to the current anti-Soviet course taken by the regime of Meo Tse-tung.

PEKING, May 16 (Reuters) .-China today accused Moscow of hypocritically advocating disarmament while expanding its nuclear arsenal.

COPENHAGEN, May 15 (AP). -Denmark was hit by a wave of strikes today as about 200,000 workers protested sales-tax increases approved by the Folketing (oarliament) last night. Within an hour of the Folke-

During the night, bakery and hrewery workers joined the pro-test strikes and by midmorning about 15,000 shipyard and steel workers followed suit. Demonstrations were arranged in Copenhagen and half a dozen other citles. Some of the strikers said they would not return to work until Monday.

The movement later spread to the railroads and forced cancellation of a large number of trains. The sales-tax bills, designed to soak up about two billion kroner ($345 million) of buying power this year, curb imports and slow the drain of currency reserves, were adopted hy seven non-Socialist parties ranging from the center to the extreme right and led by Premier Poul Hartling's Liberal minority government.

Both men were severely jostled as they made their way to waiting cars, but cordons of bodyguards managed to keep them on their feet.

Then the demonstrators jammed around the President's car, pounding on the hood and trunk with the palms of their hands. Finally, the driver got the car into the clear and raced away, leaving the crowd behind

The ceremony here was the largest of four funerals held simultaneously today in northern Israel for the victims of the Arah attack. The three others were quiet, somber ceremonies dominated by the grief of the immediate families.

Here in Safed, the mood of the several thousand people assembled at the cemetery on the outskirts was ugly.

Eighteen of the alain schoolchildren and most of the 87 wounded were students at the religious school here and lived either in Safed or nearby. The crowd at the funeral included their families, classmates and friends. Their grief seemed to be mingled with a visible bitterness. They wanted the children back and they wanted reveoze.

The weeping of the women muxed with the loud chants of the demonstrators and reached a crescendo as the 18 flag-draped coffus were brought in on five army trucks. Soldier-palibearers carried the plain wooden boxes ALGARVE AGENCY PRIVATE VILLA HOLIDAYS IN THE PORTUGUESE ALGARVE into a roped-off area and settled them gently into 18 fresh graves. Other soldiers then began shoreling dirt into the graves furiously in a desperate effort to complete the job before the police lost all control of the crowd.

A military cantor read out the names of the dead children, but his voice was drowned out before he could finish the list. A traditional prayer for the dead-Tord Full of Mercy"-was hastily chanted and then the microphone was lost to the demonstrators. "Kill the Arabs, kill the Arabs," a man shouted.

Punching and kicking the police, the demonstrators broke through and closed in around the official party, lunging at Mr. Allon. The officials then were hustled out.

Long after the demonstrators were gone, large knots of relatives stood weeping and consoling each other around the graves. Slowly. they straggled away as the sun descended behind the Galilean hills to the west.

Suddenly the silence was broken by the thunderous roar of four Israeli jet fighters headed north toward Lebanon on a reprisal air

Preparing for Party Congress

New Yugoslav Parliament Confirms Tito, Presidium

BELGRADE, May 16 (UPI) .--The newly constituted Yugoslav parliament today elected President Tito to office for life and confirmed the appointment of the nine members of the Presidium that is to lead the country after his death.

Twenty-one-gun salutes were fired around the country as President Tito who will be 83 on May 25, took the oath of office and pledged to hold the country on a steady course. The task of the state Presidium and myself is to preserve the unity and brotherhood of Yugoslavia and cohesion from the top to the bottom. We must vigilantly preserve the achievements of our revolution and post-war development," President Tito said in the nationally televised ceremony.

The ceremony sets the stage for the crucial 10th party congress in two weeks, which will be the culmination of a two-year ideological shake-up.

Thousands of party members have been purged and thousands more have lost their jobs as President Tito tried to insure that the country would be in the hands of a strong and unified Communist party when he leaves the political scene.

A key figure in the Presidium is 64-year-old Edvard Kardeli, President Tito's close aide and the country's leading theoretician. Government officials said that Mr. Kardelj was President. Tito's most likely candidate as

"But it also requires, whoever may be in this office, a strong president. I will never leave this office in a way which resigning would be, or failing to fight impeachment would be, that would make it more difficult for future presidents to make the tough decisions."

In the session, Mr. Nixon's first private interview with a newsman since January, 1973, Mr. Nixon declared: "I am not guilty of any offense under tha Constitution that is called an impeachable offense."

Therefore, Mr. Nixon said, it would be a micrake to resign simply because of sagging popularity in the polls and criticism from members of Congress. A president "must do what is right, whatever the public opinion may be at the moment," Mr. Nixon said. Unless the nation has strong presidents for the next 25 years, he said, "the chance for peace and freedom to survive in the world is down the tuhe. That's the reason I won't resign."

The President responded: "As I look back, and here history will have to record whether I made the right decision in terms of the allocation of my time, my major error was not doing what many persons very appropriately criticized me for doing in previous campaignsand that was always running my own campaign . I didn't look at budgets. I didn't look at personnel-I just didn't pay enough

Calls for Nixon to Resign Drop in Congress

By R.W. Apple Jr.

WASHINGTON, May 16 (NYT). The drum roll of appeals for President Nixon's resignation, which built to a crescendo last week, has subsided.

For the time being, at least, the White House and most of the congressional Republicans and Democrats find themselves in unaccustomed agreement that the proper way to resolve Mr. Nixon's Watergate agony is to allow the constitutional impeachment process to go forward.

The public explanations of this attitude are uniformly high-minded; resignation would set a damaging precedent; under which foture presidents might be bounded from office for mere unpopularity. Resignation would leave a substantial part of the bitter and dissatisfied.

his right to due process of law. Many of those who have advanced these explanations seem entirely sincere. But, as is inevitably the case in such situations, there are also unspoken political calculations and motivations at work

The White House, obviously, prefers impeachment to resignation because it offers Mr. Nixon a chance to survive in the presidency. And Mr. Nixon's advisers, while privately pessimistic about his chances in the House of resentatives, remain convinced that he will win the ultimate test in the Senate.

Congressional Democrats sec a number of political advantages in avoiding appeals for presidential resignation-and the party's top leadership is working hard to hulld party unity on the ques-

For one thing, several senators said privately, they can seem statesmanlike and insulate themselves from charges of leading a partisan lynch mob if they stay cool for the moment.

Equally important to many of the Democratic officeholders, the Democrats would appear likely to benefit in the November elections if Mr. Nixon stays in office through the summer. Should he leave now, a House member said, Vice-President Ford would have enough time to reconstruct the Republican image and perhaps avoid the big Republican losses that are now anticipated.

Fear of Backlash

The one big problem with the Democratic strategy is this: Should the electorate conclude that the party leadership in the ing he would have preferred not Congress is stalling in the hope to turn over any tapes and, "had we prevailed in the courts, it was of wringing the maximum electoral advantage from the the position I would have stuck Watergate scandal, there might

In doing so, the agency disclosed for the first time here that Mr. Nixon was approaching the threshold of impeachment and was facing pressure to give up his office to Vice-President Ford. The report ran only two paragraphs.

Its appearance indicated the concern with which the Kremlin is watching the President's deepening plight and further suggested the nervousness that has already been privately expressed here by some prominent Soviet observers over whether the President will be able to make his visit to Moscow next month.

Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., a Jesuit priest, said the tapes were "much more damaging" to the President than the transcripts, while Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., a strong advocate of impeachment, said the tapes showed the President as "shabby and The White House chief of INHAMINGA Mozambique saloon railroad junction town deep in the bush, at least 321 blacks are reported to have been rounded up and killed by Portuguese forces in the first four months of this year.

The last mass execution-of 22 men-took piece as late as one day after the military coup that overthrew the Portuguese goveroment on April 25, according to information transmitted by the two army chaplains of this area to religious authorities

The first allegations of mass killings were made by Dutch missionaries who closed their mission here in March and returned to the Netherlands. Their charges remain unsubstantiated but arc accepted by Portuguese priests.

Vicar-General Jose de Sousa the highest-ranking churchman in the diocese in the absence of a hishop, said that in March a womao stopped him and the Rev. A.P.J. Martens, the head of the Dutch mission, and sobbed, "This morning they took my husband away on a truck to his death,"

The Dutch priests said that the victims had been taken to the execution sites in the forests around this town in trucks, lined up at the edge of pits and shot,

The information, according to reliable sources, reached the military chaplains from soldiers who took part in the executions. The chaplains, who could oot be reached for confirmation, recently took their complaint to higher military authorities in Beira, the regional capital, 150 miles south

War Is the Evil

The way in which the Palestinian guerrillas make war is evil-evil in what is done to unarmed victims; evil in what it portends for all the peoples of the Middle East; evil, especially, in its bloody legacy to the Palestinian Arabs. The dead and maimed of Maalot compound the crime of Kiryat Shemona, and a long, bloody list of outrages stains the future of any Palestinian state before its outlines can even be glimpsed. For what kind of nation can be born of a movement whose heraldry shows a mangled child, couchant, gules, upon an oil drum, rampant, sable?

Maalot has aroused indignation and repugnance in a world inured to wanton savagery. Yet what may be missed in those countries that are ontraged, or those who take covert or open delight in it, is that none of these emotions can do more than insure a continnance of killing. What is needed to he realized now, more than ever in the tragic history of the tragic lands involved in one way or another, with Maalot is that war is the evil that spawns such evil; that only when responsible governments make peace can irresponsible fanatics be combatted and the just and reasonable aspirations of the peoples of the area have some hope of passive, of the guerrillas blackens their own case before the world. But the Israells, too, must realize—difficult as it may be to appreclate the fact when they have seen their maimed young hrought screaming out of the school at Maalot-that their fate also is dependent upon a peace.

It need not, and will not, be a peace of surrender, hy either side. But it is all too plain that neither victories on the hattlefleld nor retaliatory raids, such as yesterday's bombing and strafing in southern Lebanon, have brought security to Israel, just as terror and military onslaughts have not brought victory to the Arabs. Neither can recreate the Kingdom of David nor the Empire of the Sultans; each must find some way of living with the other.

The wild and brutal madness of three Arabs has been allowed to jeopardize the patient work that Mr. Kissinger has been shuttling between Tel Aviv and Damascus to complete-the sorting out of the prickly, contentious elemeots of national pride and military advantage that still obstruct a cease-fire on the Golan Heights. For only with a cessation of the fighting there can the real business of bringing peace to the Middle East begin, and only with such a peace can there be a real effort to bring an end to the affronts which such grim episodes as that at Maalot bring to the conscience

Nixon's Inadmissible Evidence

When President Nixon went over the heads of the members of the House Jodiciary Committee and the House to make public his now-famous transcripts, he obviously wasn't counting on the sort of intense scrutiny by the public that has turned these turgid and sometimes inscrutable documents into bestselling paperbacks. But you would think he would have been aware, first, of the perils of providing transcripts that omitted and altered material present in those tapes which were in the hands of the special prosecutor and the House Judiciary Committee. And you would think he'd also have been aware that sloppy transcription of what he did intend to make available to the public at large presented similar perils to his position. Mr. Nixon's position, after all, is that the White House-edited and transcribed verzions of the tapes qualify as suitable evidence for the Judiciary Committee's proceedings. Yet, as the new account today of the more reliable transcription of Mr. Nixon's Sept. 15, 1972, conversations demonstrates, those White House-edited best-selling transcripts can hardly be taken as reliable evi-

We intend to return to the subject of the discrepancies between the more and less complete transcriptions of the Sept. 15. 1972. conversations. Today we would just explore the meaning of the two passages called to the attention of The Washington Post earlier in the week (IHT May 15) by a very keen transcript reader, John B. Northrup, of Huntington, N.Y. The White House has acknowledged that the passages, which actually appeared one right after the other in the transcripts, in fact represent two versions of the same fragmentary exchange of conversation between the President and Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen on April 16,

Apparently the two versions are the result of successive efforts hy White House secretaries to decipher this particular passage; the two versions were inadvertently run in sequence in the scramble to prepare the transcripts for publication in time to meet the deadline of the House Judiciary Committee's subpoena.

Now, the President has consistently argued that there were "amhlgulties" in the tapes, and that people could interpret them in different ways. But we have always assumed that he was talking in terms of nuance and tone and meaning, whereas what these parallel versions tell us is :omething elsenamely, that two different listeners, with no particular expertise in these matters, can actually hear the less audible or intelligible passages in different ways. And that is just the point: In the difficult business of transcribing recordings of conversations in which the participants are either unaware of, or unwilling to admit the existence of, hidden microphones, it comes down, in large measure, to a matter of expertise aod to the quality of advanced technology that has been brought to bear in the transcription process. That is one reason (the Sept. 15 transcript is surely another; that it would be helpful to know in greater detail who did the transcribing at the White House and with what modern electronic techniques and oevices at their disposal. So far. the White House hasn't really said. That is what was so important about Mr. Northrup's discovery. For it reveals rather conclusively that the White House transcriptions are in some key respects almost certainly the work of amateurs-and that the President was incapable, with the resources available to him, of coming up with even an agreed upon version of those passages which purport to be audible and intelligible, not to mention those segunderstood at all The lesson is even clearer now than it was when the transcripts first appeared. It is that these documents, which the Judiciary Committee did not ask for or ask to have made public, are no substitute as reliable evidence for the tapes, which the committee is well equipped to submit to inspection and transcription by acknowledged experts using sophisticated electronic techniques. Only in this fashion cao those who are charged by the Constitution with sitting in judgment of the President make a valid judgment about the reliability of the "evidence" submitted by the President.

That Soviet Gas

President Nixon apparently wants to give is well served by exporting American investhis Russlan bosts next month a firm commitment in the joint development of Siherian natural gas reserves, without having at the same time to assume specific responsibility for the controversial project before the U.S. Congress and public.

That is the assumption which led the Senate to bar the granting of Export-Import Bank credits unless these are hased on formal presidential assurances that the loogpending Siberian venture would be in the "national interest." Seo. Richard S. Schweiker, the Pennsylvania Republican who pushed the measure, clearly has his doubtswhich we share - that the national interest ment capital for development of dubious forelgn energy resources when the needs and opportunities for domestic investment in this field are so evident.

But the measure, now awaiting action in Senate-House conference, would not in itself make any value judgments about a project which has come to symbolize the administration policy of detente. All it does is to reimpose formal executive accountability of a kind which has been allowed to grow vague over the years. Under today's uneasy circumstances. Congress has a positive outy to pln down accountability for presidential actions in every way it can.

WASHINGTON.-The AFL-CIO, the trade union ceoter of the United States, has been calling attention, for many years, to the growing problems posed by the radical changes in international economic relationships of the past 25 years, particularly of the past dozen years. One of these changes has been the mushrooming spread of multinational corporations and banks, with worldwide operations and international transfers of finished goods, components, technology

Multinational companies operate globally-with plants, sales agencies and other facilities in as many as 40 or more countries. In addition, they have license, patent and joint-venture ar-rangements with other companies in various countries. They manipulate the location of their production and sales internationally, depending on such fac-tors as taxes, labor costs and foreign exchange rates. They can juggle exports, imports, prices. dividends and currencies from one country to another, within the structure of the corporation and for the adventage of the corporation

Most multinational companies are U.S.-based. Bot there are major English, French, Japanese, West German, Italian, etc., multi-national firms. In addition, agencies of some of the Communist countries have been operating enterprises in other nations and also have developed joiot ventures with multinational corporations, such as the Flat venture in the Soviet Union.

Changed Trade

These developments have substantially changed the nature of world trade and international financial relations. However, theories of world trade are still rooted in the much different world of the 18th and 19th centuries and serve to confuse policy issues coocerning the realities of the 1970s.

A substantial portion of wbat national governments report as imports and exports is actually intracorporate transactions among the subsidiaries, plants, sales agencies end similar divisions of the multinational firms. Another substantial portion of such reported imports and exports is between the multinational firm and other companies, in various countries, with which it has license, patent and joint-venture arrange-

The spread of multinational corporations, particularly those based in the United States, has resulted in the internationalization of technology. One of the underlying reasons for the internationalization of American technology has been U.S. government encouragement of American companies to export technology. The very existence of multinational firms and banks, with their ebility to rapidly move large amounts of funds from one country snn or currency to another aside from the possibility of deliberate speculation in currencies—is an ever present po-tential threat to relatively stable currency and exchange-rate relations among nations.

A decision that may be rational for a multinational firm may have adverse effects for workers or consumers or social progress in the multinational's home-base nation or in other nations. Or what may be a rational decision for the multinational company or bank may create severe difficulties in international monetary relationships. Yet there is no international law, regulation, supervision or accountability of multinational firms and banks.

focused its attention on the impact of U.S.-based multinationals on U.S. workers, the U.S. economy and society. Sharply rising investments by

The AFL-CIO has naturally

U.S. firms in loreign operations have exported U.S. jobs, technology and production facilities. These investment outlays soured from $3.8 billion in 1960 to an estimated $16.3 billion in 1973. In a paper prepared for the Joint Ecocomic Committee of the U.S. Congress, Prof. Peggy B. Musgrave of Northeastern University stated that "sales of avold U.S. registration, regulation and American wages. Texaco, Mobil, Gulf and Standard Oil of California-plus Royal Dutch Shell and British Petroleum [U.S.] manufacturing subsidiaries are known as "the seven sisters." abroad are now two to three These are the huge multinational times the level of U.S. exports firms that dominate the world's of manufactured products. Τt should be recognized that the production, distribution and rereconomic and political effects of tailing of oil and petroleum maintaining a share of foreign products, through their own operations and various joint ventures. Moreover, the oil giants are also conglomerate:-for ezample, they own large percentages of U.S. natural gas, coal and uranium reserves and pipelines, as well as ventures outside of the energy area.

Consumers Hit

The companies have passed on to consumers the staggering increases in royalties charged by the oil-producing nations— royalties which the multination-als subtract from their tax liabilities to the U.S. government. Moreover, they took advantage of these conditions to boost their prices sharply on their sub-stantial U.S. production. The result has been huge price increases for American consumers, tremendous increases in oil company profits and lost revenues to he U.S. governmeot.

As a result of the trend toward nationalization of crude oil pro-duction in many of the key oilprodocing areas, the integrated multinational oil company giants are shifting the point of their major profit-making from crude oll to refining, shipping, distribu-tion and retailing, Their success, in this shift, is indicated by the sharp increases in their cashflow during the period of the Arah bloc's reduction of crude oil output and embargo.

The adverse impacts of the deterioration of the U.S. position in international economic relations and the impacts of multi-nationals are much tougher and more direct on workers and on consumers, generally, than on capital or top-management officials. Capital is mobile. Investunprofitable business to other companies, industries and countries. Top-management officials are usually much more mobile than workers. In contrast, workers have great stakes in their jobs and their communities-skills that are related to the job or industry, seniority and seniority-related benefits, investment in a home, a stake in the neighborhood schools and church. There are also significant adverse impacts on the collective bargaining strength of affected unions, on the wages and labor standards of workers in adversely affected industries. In addition, as the energy crisis shows, there are adverse impacts on the price level, and on consumer buying power.

Ideally, major parts of the solu-tion to the growing problems posed by the multinationals probably are in the international arena, through international regulation of trade and investment. there isn't even an international organization, at present, to develop and implement regula-tion of the operations of the Moreover, there is no international law on the operations of multinationals, even for the protection of the multinationals, which have their own variety of problems. The needed international regulation of multinationals is still to be achieved.

Action Needed

However, workers cannot be expected to continue to sit by and await such needed internainternational law, international regulation or even international machinery, affecting multipa-tional firms and banks, nations have acted and will continue to act to regulate the operations of multinational firms. In the United States, it is the view of the AFI-CIO that U.S. government action is urgently needed for the regulation, accountability and proper taxation of U.S.-based multinational corporations and

As we in the AFL-CIO see it. there is urgent need for an adequate U.S. trade and investment policy-for the orderly expansion of trade, including the prevention of growing adverse impacts on American workers and communities, for effective measures to regulate the operations of multinational companies; for curbs on runaway plant developments: for elimination of U.S. tax and other concessions that subsidize the foreign operations of U.S.-based multinationals; for fair and effective taxation of multinationals; for regulations and curbs on the export of American capital and technology.

Mr. Kirkland is secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO.

Executive Privilege

Viewing Nixon's Vow Of 'Nothing to Hide'

By Anthony Lewis

"The President has nothing to hide in this matter." President Nixon, television address, April 29, is "The President feels he has given them [the committee everything that he thinks they need."

BOSTON.—The House Judiciary scripts, Nixon tried to shot t

Committee, in its impeachment inquiry, has wisely refused to be distracted from its duty of hearing the evidence against President Nixon by a fight over his claims of executive privilege. But the issue is there, and it will not go away. That is the issue of a president's power in his own unreviewable discretion, to withhold from the other branches of government information bearing on criminal activities.

From the beginning of Water-gate, access to the facts has been a crucial question. Nixon certainly saw it that way. A main theme running through the edited transcripts of his White House tapes -from the very first, of Sept. 15, 1972—is the search for ways to avoid disclosure.

The various "scenarios" rehearsed by the President with Messrs. Haldeman Ehrlichman and Dean were designed to meet public pressure by giving some information "without breaking down our executive privilege," as Nixon put it on March 21, 1973. At the end of that day he asked with evident exasperation: "What the hell does one disclose that isn't going to blow something?"

Evasion

Over the last year the tactics of withholding and evasion have been employed successively against Congress, the courts and Congress again. The tactics failed in each case in the past, and now they are approaching a new point of confrontation—and in evitable failure.

In the winter of 1973 the taped conversations focused on ways to thwart the Senate .Watergate committee. On March 12, Nixon sued a statement claiming executive privilege in unprecedentedly sweeping terms: He said no White House staff member, past or present, would even appear before the committee. He with-drew from that position under public pressure, On April 17 he sa' that all White House aides would appear when called. On May 22, he said "executive privilege will not be invoked as to any testimony concerning pos-sible criminal conduct" in the Watergate attair.

Nixon next tried to use executive privilege as a way of withholding tapes from the Wa-tergate grand jury. When that course failed in the courts, he gambled on a coup: offering partial transcripts and firing Archibald Cox. The gamble failed in massive public outrage, and Nixon was forced to give the grand jury some tapes. Those in turn went to the impeachment inquiry, and in an attempt to soften their impact Nixon published edited transcripts.

More on Affluence

Most Americans can take a lot of self-criticism and put np with the negative thinking, breastbeating platitudes normally espoused by Anthony Lewis, but his article, "Affluence and Survival" (IHT, April 19) is the limit. His statements on gasoline shortages in India and the hleating cry for Americans to cut down their living standards (to the level of the Indians?) flies in the face of all logic. Who raised crude oil prices? Certainly not Americans; and where does he mention the Arab and Iranian producers who raised the prices as being even partly at fault? Nowhere, that's where!

He states: "Does it matter to Asian peasants how we live and think in America? It matters to the point of life and death. Americans must begin to understand why."

Mr. Lewis evidently has never lived nor worked in developing countries. Certainly, if he has, he has failed to see things as they are. All of India's $3.2 billion debt for grain and foodstuffs owed to the United States was canceled this year-all our help in material goods, food, advice and assistance, what about that, Mr. Lewis? (Not one mention of it in the whole article!!. India's petroleum problems, like so many of its problems, stem from a chaotic mishmash of corruption, greed, politics and mismanagement. The waste is horrendous-the country after all the years of independence is no better off than in colonial times. Whose fault is that, Mr.

It should be popular.

Both Liliana Carapt's "Milarepa" and Luigi Comencini's "A Real Crime of Love" are disappointing.

"Milarepa" recalls the oldfashioned play ut which a bookworm, dozing by the papiermache fire, unagines he is Marco Polo at the Chanese emperor's court where he experiences all sorts of high adventures and 15 brought back to reality just as he feels the chill of an enemy knife at his throat. Miss Cavani's bookworm, a student of Oriental religion, is transported in his fancy to Tibet where he spends his time trying to rid himself of worldly bondage and to attain harmony with the infinite. His spiritual ouest is dull and creeps at an intolerably petty pace.

"A Real Crime of Love" is a tiresome soap opera about two factory hands. Giuliano Gemma, the star, is one of the Italian cinema's most attractive young actors. Talented and handsome, he needs a wiser script scout.

Italy Urges IMF to Buy Gold At Market Rates From Banks

By Robert Prinsky

ROME, May 16 (AP-DJ).-Italy monetary system and expanding is proposing that the Interna-tional Monetary Fund (IMF) buy gold at a market-related price from central banks that want to sell it, Rinaldo Oscola, deputy governor of the Bank of Italy, said today.

The IMF would pay for the gold with special drawing rights (SDRs) and then sell it slowly in the free market, using the proceeds to buy bonds from in-ternational development agencies. Mr. Ossola said.

The plan is designed in meet U.S. aims as well as those of developing countries while still allowing central banks such as the Bank of Italy to benefit from the gold holdings, now nificially valued, at about one-fourth of their market price.

"I have the feeling," Mr. Ossola said. "that the Americans are more inclined toward this solution (to the gold problem) than other solutions," In Washington earlier this week, Treasury Secretary William Simon discussed EEC gold views with Dutch Finance Minister Willem Duisenberg, but there was no agreement between them. Mr. Dulsenberg had gone to put forward an EEC nccord reached at Zeist, the Netberlands, last month.

In Zeist, the nine EEC countries agreed that central banks should be free to buy and sell gold with each other at a market-related price.

Mr. Ossola said this idea not provide a buyer of last resort if a selling central bank cannot find an official customer. The Italian plan, he said, makes the IMF a buyer of last resort. It also meets U.S. sims of diminishing gold's role in the international

Aliens Boost Investment Plans in U.S.

Japanese Companies Head List in Quarter

NEW YORK, May 16 (AP),— Fifty-seven foreign firms announced plans during the first quarter to invest more than $340 million in manufacturing facili-ties in the United States, an independent study reported today.

That represents an increase from the last nine months, when foreign plans for direct owner-ship of U.S. manufacturing plants averaged 40 announcements per quarter, the study says.

Japanese firms, which announced plans for 14 new investments U.S. plants, led the list in numbers. Japan was followed by West Germany, with nine new investments planned here, and Cenada and Britain with eight planned apiece.

Most of the investments will be in chemical, machinery, electrical equipment and textile plants, the report says.

The study of direct foreign ownership of U.S. manufacturing assets is put together by the Conference Board, a nonprofit organization for the study of business and economic conditions in the United States. The study includes acquisitions of existing plants as well as plans for new construction.

None of the investments in the first quarter come from the Arab states, the Conference Board reported.

"There's lots of rumored Arah money in real estate, hotels, resorts and securities here, but they're not investing in man-ufacturing facilities in the Unit-ed States." says David Bauer, director of the project.

Mr. Bauer says most of the foreign investment in manufacturing comes from other industrialized countries that have major markets for their products in the United States.

NEW YORK, May 16 (AP-DJ). Some experts are contending that certain legally murky and possibly risky practices are creeping into the U.S. commercialpaper market,

Such practices could shake investors' confidence in these shortterm debts at a time when confidence in the financial system is low, leaving cash-hungry companies groping for funds.

And a debacle—it has happened before-could disrupt the Federal Reserve Board's intention to keep the nation's money supply within bounds.

At issue are two practices. One is the sale of commercial paper to finance long-term projects. Securities law exempts this debt from regulation, providing it matures in less than 270 days and the proceeds are used to finance "current transactions" generating the cash used to redeem the paper. An example might be the sale of such paper, by a company that extends credit to its customers, to raise cash that the credit sales dent of Standard & Poor's, one of the leading corporate creditrating agencies, estimates that "only a third to a half" of the $45 billion of commercial paper now outstanding is of the selfliquidating variety.

The second controversial pracagencies have become concerned enough to propose some changes in federal rules to prevent abuses in standby letters of credit of all kinds, including those backing commercial paper. New proposals, for example, would subject them to the same limitations that now govern the amount of outright loans a bank can make to a single borrower. And banks would have to report their standby letters of credit to regulatory agencies, One line of criticism holds that standby letters of credit backing commercial paper are illegal even now, and could promote a rash of suits against banks on the ground that the letters are not specifically authorized by national hanking law. An SEC insider says that staffers are taking an informal look at the commercial-paper market but no official investigation is planned yet, "We're studying the need to study." he says.

Japanese Agency Sees Price Rise After Wage Gains

TOKYO. May 16 (AP-DJ).-The Economic Planning Agency said today it tentatively has de-termined that the estimated 32 percent average wage increase granted in Japan this spring will result in an 6.9 percent increase in the country's average producer

The agency, in a provisional report also said wholesale prices will risc 0.5 percent and consumer prices 9.9 percent as a result of the wage gauss.

In contrast, commists assoclated with the labor movement contend that the spring wage settlements will boost the country's price letel by less than 5 per-

The agency sees producer costs rising 16.7 percent in the mining acctor, 13.4 percent in the services ares and 10.6 percent in the transport monstry.

Meanwhile, the ministry of Labor said industry will suffer a 21 percent mercase in labor cost: as a result of the 32 percent averrage wage luke granted this spring The difference was ! attributed to expectations of a lower rate of mercase for bonuses and a sharp reduction in overtime work.

The ministry also released a tentative analysis of the wholesale price trend for the five months ended in February, showing that winte prices rose 23.6 percent only 13.6 perceotage points of the gain could be accounted for by actual cost mcreases. The remainder apparently stemmed from expensive price markups, the ministry said.

Warrants issued with the 6% US-Dollar Bonds due 1980 Adjustment of the Option Price

BASF Aktiengesellschaft has exercised the authorization of its shareholders' meeting of June 20, 1973 for the issue of bonds with warrants to be offered to its shareholders. The option price will therefore be reduced according to the formula explained in Article 7 of the Conditions of Warrants. As a consequence, the option price for each ordinary share (nominal amount DM 50) to be purchased by exercise of warrants shall be reduced to effective May 14, 1974.

DM 209,08

For the first time, the ordinary shares will be quoted "ex Bezugsrecht" ("ex rights") on the aforementioned date. From this date on ordinary shares can be purchased by exercise of warrants only "ex rights".

in addition, at the company's annual meeting. taking place on July 2, 1974, the shareholders will be asked to adopt a resolution for a capital increase from the company's reserves in the relation 20:1. If the announced capital increase is resolved by the shareholders' meeting. holders of the warrants of our 6 % US-Dollar Bonds are entitled to receive 1.05 ordinary shares in the nominal amount of DM 50 each instead of 1 ordinary share at the option price of DM 209.08.

FLO

A Biography of Frederick Law Olmsted By Laura Wood Roper. Johns Hopkins University Press. 555 pp. Illustrated. $15.

Reviewed by Paul Goldberger

NOTHING in Frederick Law made slaves often slow and in Olmsted's record—"a farmer responsible. who had not made his farms pay, a writer who had made nothing but his reputation, a publisher who had gone bankrupt"-suggested his qualifications for conceiving the design for New York's Central Park, Laura Wood Roper tells us in her superb "FLO: A Biography of Frederick Law Olmsted." But Oimsted not only conceived the design (in partnership with the architect Calvert Vaux), he also skillfully maneuvered it through years of political obstacles to assure that it would be executed intact. And then through it he laid the groundwork for the modern profession of landscape architecture.

Central Park and Olmsted's numerous subsequent works of park design succeeded brilliantly in spite of their creator's lack of an orthodox background in landscape architecture. Mrs. Roper makes a persuasive case for attributing much of the parks' success to Olmsted's 'asic outlook He was a profoundly democratic man, who combined humanitarian instincts with a mind that was sharp, eager to learn and un-encumbered by ideology.

Olmsted's deepest interests were not aesthetic, but humane: He saw his parks as peoples' estates, places in which the masses could relax and free themselves from the pressures of the city. He rigidly disciplined himself to learn the technical aspects of landscape design, but it was always the democratic impulse that motivated

What "FLO" is, then, is an exploration of one of the 19th century's finer (and, notil recently less appreciated) minds. It is only incidentally a book about landscape architecture, yet in its discussions of the philosophical basis for both Central Park and Olmsted's later works it is a book no student of parks can afford to be without.

Olmsted was born in 1822 in Hartford, Conn. His early years were restless: He left school, sailed to China, bought a farm on New York's Staten Island. His name first became known through a series of reports he did on a tour through the South for The New York Daily Times, which were eventually published in book form. Olmsted was vehemently opposed to slavery, yet his tone was free of the hysteria of many abolitionists and combined the intellectual toughmindedness and human compassion that were to mark all of his investigations. Olmsted argued that slavery destroved the incentives of blacks and that it was the condition of bondage rather than any inherent qualities of black people that

In a parade of careers that ca suggest comparison only with Benjamin Franklin's, Olmsted li the voluntary Sanitary Con mission during the Civil Wa ran a small publishing hous assisted in the founding of the magazine The Nation and tox over management of a Californ gold mining property for the Years.

It was at Mariposa, the Cal fornia mine, that Olmsted man great progress on a book on the nature of American society the he intended as an answer to the Trollopes, Dickenses and oth writers critical of America. Ti book, which was never finishe argued that the crudities of Ame ican society were the result me of democracy itself but of the pioneer conditions that still pr vailed in many areas. Olmstrargued that partisans of aristic cratic societies were unable to un derstand the true nature of d mocracy, and went on to recal as few others did at the tim that much of America had bee settled by members of the d pressed classes. He maintaine that the valid question to a was not how far beneath gentle men Americans were, but how in above peasants.

Putting Olmsted's work in land scape architecture into the per spective of his entire life is or of Mrs. Roper's central purpose and she accomplishes this will skill. Still, it is difficult not return to Central Park, for ther on those 840 acres, is the physic. embodiment of the democrat ideal Ohnsted stood for.

The design of the park bri liantly combines great publ spaces such as the Mall Bethesd Fountain and the Sheep Meado with solitary areas like the Ram ble and the almost infinite ve riety of walks, offering an enor mous variety of spatial experience and permitting vast numbers of people to use the part for diffi rent purposes without getting i one another's way. And the sink ing of the transverse roads cuttin through the park to perm traffic to pass through wi minimum intrusion was m precedented as advanced di planning.

Mrs. Roper reviews Olmston career with thoroughness ar especially in the closing chapt recounting his senile old a, with dignity. Her discussion his life is not critical, but neith is she so close to her subje as to be falsely adulatory. Th tone is more reserved; rath than make obvious judgmen present the facts, which s weaves into a fascinating story

She can perhaps be faulted i not being quite as exhaustive her descriptions of his design some of which are dealt with or briefly, and none brought in the context of today. But enou others have done that, and t need has been far more urge for a work which would de with Olmsted as one of the 19century's more fascinating der ocratic thinkers. This Mrs. Roc has given us, with the clear it telligence and the grace that we Olmsted's own.

Pope's Blessing Starts Cyclers In Tour of Italy

FORMIA, Italy, May 15 (AP): - Belglum's Wilfried Reybrouck won the opening leg of the Tour of Italy cycling classic today, a 101mile stretch which began with a blessing from Pope Paul VI in Vatican City.

Reybrouck was clocked in 4 hours 16 minutes 12 seconds on the ride down the Italian coast to this town on the Gulf of Gasta, He crossed the finish line ahead of the pack, with two fellow Belgians, Roger de Vlaeminck and Patrick Sercu. placing in the top five. Favorite Eddy Marckx finished 72d.

The 57th running of the race began in unusual fashion: Pope Paul addressed the cyclists who were gathered in St. Damascus courtyard. In the photo on the right, Merckx kisses the Pope's hand

Then, too, Schmautz and Wayne Cashman had empty nets to shoot at from inside 10 feet and both missed, so Esposito's comment seemed correct: "We had the chances, they had the breaks."

Aeros Lead, 2-0, In WHA Series Against Cougars

CHICAGO, May 15 (UPI).— Andre Hinse scored two goals to lead Houston A to a 6-1 victory over the Chicago Cougars last night and give the Aeros a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven-game World Hockey Association championship series.

Houston had scored all of its goals before Frankie Rochon slapped a 40-footer past Aero goalie Doo McLeod to spoil his shutout with just 16 seconds left in the game.

Hinse got his first tally on a second period power play. Then in the float period, he scored 24 gles, but King battled back for seconds after Jim Sherrit had a 7-5 victory in the second tallied the Aeros' fourth goal.

Your Fare, Lady

Observer

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—It seems to also much easier to cook. There five minutes with the TV set this encounter which are reminiscent year without seeing somebody eat of Strindberg's man-woman hate something absolutely awful. Or scene, but the male turns out to somebody, usually a woman, getting ready to serve something to eat that is absolutely awful. The big thing on U.S. television used to be headache. Every five minutes they would stop the enterta i n m e o t, and on would come somebody with e headache. and then-bingo! -the headache would be miraculously cured. For 20 years at least, headache was the king of television.

Baker

I haven't clocked a typical evening on the tube this year, but my impression-and with television impressions are all that count—my impression is that the preparation and eating of absolutely awful food is beating headache by at least two to one. Not surprisingly, upset stomach and indigestion are also doing very well. My observations suggest that indigestion is neckand-peck with headache while unset stomach is closing fast on hard-to-remove stains, in terms of time on tuhe.

I said that the food on television was absolutely awful, and that's not fair, of course, because I haven't eaten any of it, and don't plan to as long as I have the strength to resist force-feeding. The point is that the idea of this TV food-the concept-is absolutely awful. Food should be grown, but this food being sold on the tube has not been grown; it has been manufactured.

It is hard to understand the men who eat this food, because they are always smiling after the first mouthful, or nuzzling their wives after finishing the thing off. There is one mildly rebelhous male who, upon being served some factory-made chicken, asks whatever happened to real

me you can't go more than are threatening overtones to this be a sniveler. He eats the phony chicken happily.

> What the feminists call sexism is superficially preserved in all these commercials, since they always cast the woman in the cook's role and make the husband the breadwinner home from his labor to play stern judge of the wife's cooking. This is only superficial, however. What is really going on here is something much trickier.

The point about this television food is that it requires no skill, little time and not much work to put it on the table. A typical teledrama, for instance, concerns two wives unboxing a spaghetti dinner. Both dinners come in boxes. Wife One opens her box and finds nothing but spaghetti. She is in trouble hecause she will have to add meat. Not Wife Two. Her spaghetti dinner (the spopsor's, naturally) comes with meat boxed in. Everything in one box.

She nips off camera for a second and-presto!-reappears with a steaming spaghetti dinner with meat. Wife One looks surly and defeated, and with good reason, for she will now have to go to the food locker and open another box -of factory-made bamburger, perhaps. Wife Two had to open only one box to make dinner. Poor Wife One has suffered the drudgery of opening two.

So while the commercials seem to cast women in the cook's role. in fact, they do not. How can the women be cooks when there is no cooking going on?

Most of what passes for cooking with this television food is nothing but opening, thawing and heating. The real message of the factory-food commercials is not that women's place is in the kitchen. It is that if a woman has a benighted husband who believes such archaic cleptrap, she can fake the cooking effortlessly, thanks to factory-made food, have idle hours in which to do as she pleases, and then reduce the poor dolt to eye-rolling delight in her skill at opening a

AT HERBANG PROFESSION DESCRIPTION OF THE PROFESSION OF THE PROFESS

Sarah Yazzie. 19, one of the 10 Yazzie children, in front of family hogan.

How an Indian Family Lives In the U.S.

By Martin Waldron

WHIPPOORWILL, Ariz. (NYT) .- Alice Yazzie, a Navajo, is 36. She looks older. Standing in the but, 12 feet in diameter, where she lives on a remote Arizona mesa with her husband. Joe, and 10 children, she giggled like a teen-ager as she cooked fry bread for recent visitors. She speaks no English. The Yazzies are said by tribal officials to be typical rural Navajos living off the land deep within the 25,000-square-mile Navajo reserva-

Although the land is bitter cold in winter and swelteringly hot in summer, the Yazzies do not find it an unpleasant life. By any statistical standard, Alice Yazzic and her family would be considered underprivileged. Except for a few refinements—a cook stove, a truck, organized schools and a com laundry 10 miles awaythey live pretty much as Navajos have lived for a thousand years. The Yazzies' children range in age from 3 to 22 and all of them are still at home, living with their parents in the hogan, the traditional Navajo lodging of cedar logs and mud.

The Yazzies have no electricity, no telephone, no water. The nearest water is 10 miles away at a trading post along with the coin laundry. The Yazzies have no mail delivery and the Indian school where six of the children go is 35 miles away.

Mrs. Yazzie seems content. As she mixes and fries Navajo bread, she keeus a sparkling eye on her visitors and breaks into laughter as Clare Thompson, an official interpreter for the Navajo Indian Council, makes a remark in Navajo.

As far as the eye can see, up to 75 miles, there is nothing but an occasional wolf and miles of scrubby sagebrush, "Indians use sagebrush to treat colds," Mr. Thompson said, leaning down to wipe the nose of one of the Yazzie children and pinching off a sprig of sagebrush at the same time. "Smell this" (crushed, it smells like Mentholatum How much money do the Yazzies have to live on? How do they

Such questions are considered importinent by the proud end haughty Navajos, and when Mrs. Yazzle was asked, there was a long silence. She was too polite to indicate to the interpreter that she considered it to be a tasteless query. Mr. Thompson would not explore further the finances of the Yazzies, but he did make an educated guess about a typical Navajo family who might be living, as the Yazzies do, 35 miles from the

First, like the Yazzies, such a family would have a flock of 30 to 50 sheep, with income from the sheep approximating $1,200 a year. A family with 10 children would get $185 to $200 a month from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Mr. Thompson continued, and would be eligible for surplus farm products distributed by the federal government-beans, butter, rice, peanut hutter, lard and flour. With no rent or utility bills, this family would be able to pay $85 a month toward the cost of buying a pickup truck, be added.

The Yazzies have such a truck. They use it to shop at the trading post 10 miles away and to haul milk cans filled with drinking water to their hogan.

Keeping house for a family of 12 is no overwhelming task in a hogan. The Yazzies have two beds. Four people sleep on them while the other eight family members sleep on sheepskins thrown on the earth floor at night

The stable of the Yazzie riet is fry bread-made of a flourbaking powder dough and fried in lard. It is surprisingly light

The family ests one big meal a day-beans, rice and meat !lamb or mutton from the family flock, or pork or beef from the trading

Occasionally at the trading post, the Yazzies buy carrots, lettuce and other fresh vegetables, paying approximately twice as much for them as do families in cities.

Although the Yazzies are not regularly exposed to radio, television or newspapers, the influence of advertising has reached them. Mrs. Yazzie uses popular bleaches and detergents when she has her laundry done at the trading post. Navajo families who live in the recesses of the reservation do little or no entertaining. They party by driving to a bar off the reservation (for those who want a drink at home, mobile bootleggers make regular rounds on the back trails, selling liquor illegally at extremely inflated prices).

"Poor? Underprivileged? What are those terms?" the interpreter demanded. They have the sun. They have space. They have fresh air," Mr. Thompson said. "What is being poor is living in ghettos in New York City or Washington. They have no sun. They have no place for the children to run and play."

Akiyaki Nosaka, 43, known for erotic novels, told foreign correspondents in Tokyo Tuesday that Emperor Hirehite should resign. Nozaka, who won a Japanese literature prize in 1967 for two of his novels, said, "I think the emperor has responsibility (for World War II). I think the emperor should accept that responsibility and resign. There may have been no crime committed by the emperor or empress but their existence itself, I think, is a crime. No matter how good a person the emperor may be personally... it was by chanting Long live the emperor that millions of Japanese were forced to die and many foreigners were killed."

The writer, reports Sam Jameson of The Los Angeles Times, admitted that his defiance of a Japanese taboo-calling for the emperor's resignation-was easier "in front of foreigners." Nozaka is seeking a seat in the Japanese parliament in the July 7th elections-he is running as an independent.

"I can't wait to go home, eat some fish and chips and sink a pint of beer," "Walter Talbot." 73, admitted Wednesday in San Diego. "Oh, it will feel so good." Talbot who isn't revealing his real name for the moment, jumped ship 54 years ago-he was serving on the Calcutta, an escort vessel on the then Prince of Waies's visit to North America. Leter, "Talbot' joined the U.S. Navy served for six years, wes discharged, later re-enlisted during World War H. For many years, he has lived in San Diego with his wife, the events of a half-century ago a distant mem-

But another Prince of Wales came along. When HMS Jupiter, with Prince Charles aboard. docked in San Dlego. "Talbot's" conscience got the better of him. He surrendered to the Jupiter's captain. The British consulate considered his case two months before telling him this week that he would receive an honorable discharge from the Royal Navy. Talbot will resume his former name and apply for U.S. citizenship—in the meantime, he's looking forward to a trip to England.

On the subject of Prince Charles-he is to live in 2 115room mansion in Kent, Prime Minister Harold Wilson made the announcement Thursday.
